FIRE DEPARTMENT DONATION

Big month for Elmwood Fire Dept.

By JEFF LAMPE For The Weekly Post

ELMWOOD - June has proven to be a windfall for the Elmwood Fire Department. Through donations, fundraising and grants, the department has racked up nearly $50,000 in cash or materials.

The start of the month saw the return of the department's most visible fundraiser, a popular pancake breakfast that opens Elmwood's annual Strawberry Festival. Fire Chief Bob Tannock said the breakfast raised more than $4,000 plus an additional $2,500 matching grant from the Modern Woodmen of America insurance company.

Shortly thereafter, Graham Health System of Canton donated

The Elmwood Fire Department recently received a donation of a Lucas chest compression device from Canton-based Graham Health System. Heritage Days ahead

Princeville's festival back minus beer tent

By JEFF LAMPE

For The Weekly Post PRINCEVILLE - While the beer tent is gone for another year, most activities that have made Heritage Days a popular event in Princeville are back this weekend after a one-year, pandemic-related hiatus.

Getting to this point was not always certain, though, according to Beth Duttlinger, president of the Princeville Civic Association, which organizes the festival.

"Some of this was like a wing and a prayer when we were doing the planning, because we weren't sure how much would be open," Duttlinger said. "So we're very fortunate the state is open and we can do the carnival."

The annual festival opens today at 5 p.m. with carnival rides and a food tent preceding a 6 p.m. concert by the Central Illinois Banio Club at the Stevens Square Stage, to be followed at 7:30 p.m. by The Marriage Game.

Friday marks the official opening of the Art Show at Lillie M. Evans Library at 4:30 p.m., where Duttlinger expects up to 50 entries. Rides and the food tent start at 5, the Princeville High School football auction is at 5:30 on the stage and the talent show and vacation bible school performances start at 7. Among the talent show entries is skilled local pianist Daniel Herrmann.

Saturday starts with a Lions Club breakfast from 7-10 a.m. and the 5K run/walk at 8, with registration opening at 7 at Village Hall.

The parade is at 1 p.m. and will be led by grand marshalls Kerry and Ann Cordis. Rides open after the parade Continued on Page 2

Wonder weed chicory deserves more respect

BV GRETCHEN STEELE

For The Weekly Post

Chicory really is a wonder weed. Poor old chicory just doesn't get the respect it deserves!

Across Illinois, chicory is bursting forth along the roadsides, scattered out in fields and often in what seems like the most inhospitable places. Chicory likes disturbed, crappy ground. Heck, I've seen it pop up in the cracks of sidewalks and parking lots. The prolific blue weed provides a lovely view on your morning commute. Often there will be vast swaths of delicate pale blue blooms in the early morning. As the day progresses, since chicory blossoms are not fans of the scalding sun, blossoms may close up some, only to fully reopen the following day.

But chicory is so much more than just a common roadside weed - it's an excellent edible that has several uses. I must caution about harvesting chicory from heavily traveled roadsides or ditch lines that look like they may have been sprayed or had overspray from adjacent fields. known for its use as a coffee additive or substitute. Many people have been enthralled by "New Orleans Style" coffee, a mixture of chicory and regular coffee, and sometimes a few shakes of spices and a little cream.

During the Civil War, when the Union Navy cut off the port of New Orleans one of the largest coffee importation sites - chicory became a necessary substitute for coffee. People also turned to chicory as a coffee substitute during the Depression and when coffee was rationed during World War II.

All parts of the chicory plant can be consumed: leaves, flowers, flower buds and roots. Chicory is probably best

NDEPENDENT THOUGHT... HREAT TO DEMOCRACY

Ducklings scared of water? Who knew?

GUEST VOICES

I had it all planned for June 10, the day when I would release my young mallard ducks into the lake behind my house. I had removed the pen around the "Quack Shack," the small building where the ducks spend their nights, and used the panels to create a path down to the shore.

As I prepared to open the door, my mom readied the camera while my dad and husband stood by to watch and celebrate this joyous milestone in the lives of my avian charges. But you know what they say about "the best-laid plans ... "

Let me back up a bit. Some weeks ago, I shared with Weekly Post readers my experience receiving five duck hatchlings to raise. As a bird enthusiast, I felt good about beating the odds of duckling survival in the wild.

In his book, "What's It Like to Be a Bird," David Allen Sibley says only 15 percent of mallard ducks survive to fledge. "Once hatched, fewer than half of all ducklings survive the first two weeks, and only about a third of those survive the next six weeks to fledging."

Sibley also says the mortality rate is high among hen mallards sitting on eggs.

Once the ducklings no longer needed a heat lamp, they were evicted out of the house and into the garage while my husband built the Quack Shack. When their new home was ready, the ducks were able to go outside. I placed the baby pool within a pen that surrounded the Quack Shack's door. They seemed to like this arrangement for awhile.

Back to June 10. As I opened the door, we anticipated delighted ducks splashing into the water, forever leaving behind their little pool. There would be a fabulous picture to give The Weekly Post.

That's not what happened.

Once the ducks were out, I walked behind them to urge them toward the water. They cooperated for a couple of feet before deciding that was far enough. When they began to double back, I tossed each one in the lake. They closed ranks at the shore for the space of seconds and then raced back up the path around my legs to the familiarity of the Quack Shack.

Meanwhile, through all this unexpected chaos, the only pictures my mom managed to get were unflattering images of my backside. They will not be submitted to The Post.

For just under a week, I left the "path" to the lake. At that point the ducks discovered that flapping their wings gave them lift. There was no more point to the barriers, so I removed them.

Since then, each foray into the yard takes them a little farther than their last. They make me laugh as they reach some unseen boundary that causes them to suddenly waddle quickly or fly back to the familiar ground of the prior pen.

As of Tuesday, they still haven't made it to the lake permanently, though there have been unintended landings in the water after flight. They are still scared of the water... who'd have known?

Rob Hilsabeck of the Department of Natural Resources does. He said without a Momma Duck to guide them, young ducklings "usually need to gradually get comfortable to larger water areas."

I expect the ducks to muster their courage and fly into the lake any day now. But for now, as they explore our vast yard and experiment with flight, I will be patient and simply enjoy them.

Worker wages not cause of higher food prices

After my first year at the Big U, I returned to the southern Illinois dairy farm of my youth for a summer of work. The first task, however, was to ask my father to double my hourly pay from 50cents an hour, the amount I'd been paid through high school, to $1 per hour.

"Well," Dad said calmly, "a dollar an hour is a man's wage and I don't see a man standing in front of me." Discussion over.

Federal minimum wage that year was $2 an hour but no "hired man" –or, evidently, "hired boy" – ever received that wage from my father.

I didn't make the same mistake the following summer. After a month home at, again, 50-cents an hour, I returned to the university to work at its dairy research farms for the fantastic wage of $2.10 an hour.

And my father? He encouraged it because hired men (and even hired sons) back then were both plentiful and cheap. He also had the law on his side; farmworkers were exempt from federal wage requirements.

Little has changed since. According to a recent U.S. Department of Labor National Agricultural Workers Survey, the "average total income of farm workers is between $15,000 to $17,499 a year for individuals and $20,000 to $24,999 for a family."

That means, notes the survey, that "... 25 percent of all farm workers had a family income below the federal poverty line."

This less-than-a-living wage reality for most farm and food workers points to another central truth in U.S. agriculture: worker wages are not the central component of increased food costs despite Big Ag's constant whining that they are.

For example, in early June the fast casual restaurant chain Chipotle announced it was raising menu prices 4 percent, or about 35 cents per order, to pay for the company's raising average worker wages from $13 to $15 per hour.

Two months earlier, Chipotle acknowledged that its CEO, Brian Niccol, had earned $38 million in 2020, or 31 times his $1.2 million base salary.

BusinessInsider.com did the math on Niccol's pay; it "was 2,898 times more than the median Chipotle worker's $13,127 salary in 2020 working 25 hours a week in Illinois."

Moreover, it continues, "A study from California State University San Bernardino found that for a minimum wage increase of 10 percent, food prices increased by just 0.36 percent" – or a fraction of the price hike Chipotle instituted because of "higher worker wages."

The company is simply pocketing the lion's share of the price increase as profit and blaming it on higher worker pay. Baloney.

If we're talking baloney, cue Big Meat.

Once again meatpackers are bellowing about how they must have less government oversight and more labor leeway to survive today's pandemic-squeezed market.

In April, a federal judge told JBS USA, the global meatpacking giant, that it must slow kill floor line speeds at its Ottumwa, Iowa, hog killing plant back to 1,106 hogs per hour. JBS had recently raised line speeds under a U.S. Department of Agriculture October 2019 rule change. That rule, however, was contested in federal court.

More remarkable than the order to return kill speeds to just 1,106 hogs per hour, is how many federal politicians, led by Iowa's Sen. Charles Grassley, rallied to restore unlimited kill speeds because, as reported by DTN, Grassely claimed "slower line speeds could lead to a $23 per head decline in hog prices."

Even if true – Grassely cited an Iowa State University source for the number – not even a nickel of the money would flow to most hog farmers since about 85 percent of all U.S. hogs are raised under contract for (wait for it, yes) meatpackers.

As such, most, if not all, of any extra profit made through faster, more dangerous kill speeds would flow to the packers, not the hog farmers or plant workers.

But that's the way it's been since, well, too long.

Continued from Page 1 the chicory plant that are roasted and then ground. In America, chicory has historically been used as a coffee substitute during difficult times.

Early settlers often grew chicory in their home gardens, and the escape from those gardens has resulted in the plant becoming naturalized across America.

Besides the edible root, chicory has other culinary uses. When cooking with chicory, harvest in the spring or fall since summer's heat makes them taste bitter. Young chicory leaves can be added to salads, flower buds can be pickled and blossoms added to salads. Mature leaves can be used as a cooked green. Be forewarned: chicory greens have a bit of a bitter bite.

The roots are what so many foragers prize and are most commonly harvest for the delicious drink made from roasted and ground roots or mixed with coffee. For those wishing to harvest the root and try their hand at making a chicory drink or chicory/coffee blend, it's best to harvest the root in the fall. At the end of summer, chicory stems are tall scraggly and dry. So mark the spot now when they are blooming to make it easier to find come a rainy early fall period.

The reason for picking a rainy period to harvest is that chicory has long, deep taproots and can be a real bear to dig out of hard, dry soil. It's much easier if done when the soil is damp. You will likely also have to dig around the edges of the plant and then tug at it to get it freed from scent that comes from roasting chicory. Usually, that takes about 30 minutes. The finished product should be crispy and easily break in your fingers.

Though hard to describe, it is almost worth roasting roots just to have the wonderful sort of spicy, sort of chocolatey, earthy fragrance fill your house.

After your sliced/ chopped roots are sufficiently dried, roasted and cooled, put them through a coffee grinder or blender. This step can involve some trial and error, depending on the type of coffee grinder you have. If I have a large batch, I find it easier to run through the blender on chop then a few whizzes on liquify to get the powder consistency I like.

You definitely will want to filter this versus just dumping it in a cup and pouring boiling water over it (unless you like a gritty drink). I use roughly 1.5 tablespoons of ground chicory per 1 cup of water - but that's just my personal choice.

You can also mix with your favorite coffee blend at a ratio of 1 part chicory to 3 parts coffee. By all means, experiment around with this delightful caffeine-free substitute. Try it with cream, a little sugar, honey, or even yummier a dollop of molasses. Mix in a bit of cocoa powder the variations are only limited by your imagination!

As always when it comes to foraging, make sure that you have correctly identified the plant and only try a little of any wild food the first time.

Until it's time to dig those roots, enjoy the beauty that the lovely delicate pale blue flowers bring to our landscape, and dream of that beautiful aroma and taste of a warm

Other approvals were: Non-certified salaries; $45,909 for Health/Life Safety work at the Grade School; $14,975 for the High School building's roof repair; and the high school girls' basketball team's overnight trip to Wisconsin on July 11-14.

In personnel, the board approved: the resignation of Lyndsey Forney as a grade school cafeteria employee; the hiring of Lyndsey Forney, Joanna Fox and Ryan Gilles as grade school paraprofessionals; the hiring of Josh McKown as 8th grade boys' basketball coach; and hiring Jaden Shoff for Junior High Cheerleading.

In his report President Steve Updyke thanked the administration "for a great year, last year" during the Covid pandemic and the effort that they put forth to keep the school functional and have in-person attendance by students.

Shinall praised the Class of 2021 for completing its senior year in a "dignified manner." He thanked the custodians and summer maintenance workers for the work completed thus far in preparing the schools for the upcoming school year.

Contractors have removed the grade school bleachers in May and will install new bleachers in July. Walgreen's held a COVID-19 vaccination clinic for community members ages 12 and up with the second dose scheduled for July 7.

Source of Drinking Water

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity. Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally occurring or result from urban storm water runoff, industrial, or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban storm water runoff, and residential uses.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial pro-cesses and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban storm water runoff, and septic systems.

Radioactive contaminants, which can be naturally occurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at (800) 426-4791

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA pre-

Definitions: The following tabes contain scientific terms and measures, some of which may require explanation.

Avg: Regulatory compliance with some MCLs are based on running annual average of monthly samples.

Level 1 assessment is a study of the water system to identify potential problems and determine (if possible) why total coliform bacteria have been found in our water system. Level 2 Assessment: A Level 2 assessment is a very detailed study of the water system to identify potential problems and determine (if possible) why an E. coli MCL violation has occured and/or why total coliform bacteria have been found in our water system on multiple occasions.

Maximum Contaminant Level or MCL: The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal or MCLG: The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

Maximum residual disinfectant level or MRDL: The highest level of a disinfectant allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.

Maximum residual disinfectant level goal or MRDLG: The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contaminants.

na; not applicable. mrem: millirems per year (a measure of radiation absorbed by the body). ppb: micrograms per liter or parts per billion - or one ounce in 7,350,000 gallons of water.

ppm: milligrams per liter or parts per million - or one ounce in 7,350 gallons of water.

Treatment Technique or TT: A required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.

Definitions:

Action Level Goal (AGL): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. ALG's allow for a margin of safety. Action Level: The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

scribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. FDA regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health. Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800) 426-4791.

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and compo-nents associated with service lines and home plumbing. We cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can min-imize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water, testing methods and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead

Source Water Assessment We want our valued customers to be informed about their We want our valued customers to be morned about their water quality. If you would like to learn more, please feel wel-come to attend any of our regularly scheduled meetings. The source water assessment for our supply has been completed by the Illinois EPA. If you would like a copy of this information, please stop by City Hall or call our water operator, 309-368-0009. To view a summary version of the completed Source Water As-sessments, including: Importance of Source Water; Susceptibility to Contamination determination and documentation/recommendation of Source Water Protection Efforts, you may access the IIlinois EPA website at http://www.epa.state.il.us/cgi-bin/wp/swap-fact-sheets.pl. Source of Water: Williamsfield. To determine Williamsfield's susceptibility to groundwater contamination, information obtained during a Well Site Survey published in 1990 by the Illinois EPA, and Source Water Protection Plan were reviewed. Based on in-formation contained in these documents, fourteen potential sources of groundwater contamination are present that could pose a hazard to groundwater pumped by the Williamsfield community water supply wells. these include Ferrol Gas, Spoon River FS, Farmhouse Gas Station, Sunoco Station, Hart Feed & Milling, Williamsfield Farmers Co-op, Na-Churs Plant Food Company, Country Craft Ceramics, the Village of Williamsfield, Ingle Construction Co., Wheelhouse Lawn & Garden, Gas & Service Station, unknown machine shop, and Weavers Hardware. Based upon this information, the Illinois EPA has determined that Williamsfield Wells #2 and #3 are not susceptible to IOC, VOC, or SOC contamination. This determination is based on a number of criteria including: monitoring conducted at the wells; monitoring conducted at the entry point to the distribution system; and the available hydrogeologic data for the wells. In anticipation of the U.S. EPA's proposed Ground Water Rule, the Illinois EPA has determined that Williamsfield's community water supply wells are not vulnerable to viral contamination. This determination is based upon the evaluation of the following criteria during the Vulneralability Waiver Process: the community's wells are properly constructed with sound integrity and proper site conditions; there is a hydrogeologic barrier that restricts pathogen movement; all potential routes and sanitary defects have been mitigated such that the source water is adequately protected; monitoring data did not indicate a history of disease outbreak; and the sanitary survey of the water supply did not indicate a viral contamination threat. However, having states this, the U.S. EPA is proposing to require States to identify systems in karst, gravel and fractured rock aquifer systems as sensitive. Water systems utilizing these aquifer types would be required to perform routine source water monitoring. Because the community's wells are constructed in a confined aquifer, which should provide an adequate degree of protection to prove the movement of notherappe protection to prevent the movement of pathogens into the wells, well hydraulics were not considered to be a significant factor in the vulnerability determination.

Legislators pass Gov. Pritzker 660+ bills

By JERRY NOWICKI

Capitol News Illinois SPRINGFIELD – With the first year of the 102nd General Assembly mostly wrapped up, lawmakers as of last Friday had officially passed 664 bills through both houses for eventual consideration by the governor.

Gov. JB Pritzker had signed 17 of them as of Friday, including last Thursday's signing of the state's operating budget and a bill making several changes to the state election code.

Charlie Wheeler, an emeritus professor at the University of Illinois Springfield who covered the Illinois General Assembly for the Chicago Sun-Times for more than two decades, said he was struck by the "progressive nature" of the bills passed by the General Assembly this year.

"The voting legislation, for example, you look at what other states are doing and then you look at what we did, that was kind of an example" of the strongly Democratic legislation that passed this year, Wheeler said.

That elections law, which took effect immediately upon the governor's signature, instructs election authorities to create a permanent vote-by-mail list which voters may choose to join. It also makes Election Day 2022 a state holiday and requires election authorities to create a central voting site where all residents within the authority's jurisdiction can cast a ballot on Election Day 2022.

It also allows political candidates to use campaign funds for child care and care for other dependents, and requires that any vacancy in the General Assembly be filled in an open meeting, rather than behind closed doors. It beefs up cybersecurity requirements as well.

It allows – but does not require – county jails to establish polling places to allow voting by inmates who are residents of the county and have not been convicted of the offense for which they are in custody. It also creates provisions for curbside voting during early voting and on Election Day.

Like next year's budget, the elections bill passed with support from only supermajority Democrats – a common theme for some of the more controversial legislation that has passed during Pritzker's time in office. Partisan bills included a 2019 minimum wage hike, placing an illfated graduated income tax on the 2020 ballot, criminal justice reforms that passed in January, and newly drawn legislative maps that will likely help Democrats maintain those supermajorities.

While there have been bipartisan victories as well, such as the budget and capital infrastructure plans passed during Pritzker's first year in office, legalization of adult-use marijuana, and expanding gambling, the partisan makeup of the General Assembly has allowed the governor to use his veto sparingly.

A supermajority is reached when a party has at least 71 votes in the House or 36 in the Senate, giving them the ability to override a governor's veto. Democrats have been over those numbers for the entirety of Pritzker's time in office.

Wheeler said it's common to see fewer vetoes in such a situation. But he also noted Pritzker has worked well with Democrats in the General Assembly, despite some reported clashes, particularly pertaining to negotiations behind an energy bill that has repeatedly stalled when nearing a vote this year.

"They've been on pretty much the same page," Wheeler said, noting any disagreements are "nothing compared to some of the past animosity, for example, with Madigan and (former Democratic Gov. Rod) Blagojevich who sort of mutually detested each other."

Pritzker has used the veto just 11 times as governor.

In his first year, Pritzker vetoed just eight of the 599 bills passed in the regular session and one of the 38 bills passed in the veto session. The majority of those vetoes were procedural due to similar language being passed in other bills during the same General Assembly.

In early 2020, he was nearly unanimously overridden on a veto of a bill creating tax breaks for aircraft parts. But another override vote called by the Republican sponsor of a bill affecting the state's ability to apply for waivers for state employee insurance failed in 2019.

Pritzker's second year was slower paced, with just 22 bills passing both houses in the regular session which was waylaid by the COVID-19 pandemic. Lawmakers then came back for a "lame duck" session in January 2021, passing 23 bills, including several measures backed by the Illinois Legislative Black Caucus, before the 101st General Assembly adjourned.

Pritzker vetoed one of those bills, a measure establishing pretrial interest on civil monetary awards, as lawmakers negotiated a different pretrial interest measure that he signed earlier this year.

In contrast, according to a Capitol News Illinois analysis of Illinois General Assembly website data, former Democratic Gov. Rod Blagojevich issued 133 vetoes in the 95th General Assembly of 2007 and 2008, the final one before his 2009 impeachment. In that two-year session, 87 of those vetoes became law either with the changes Blagojevich suggested or through legislative overrides.

Things went better for Blagojevich's successor, Pat Quinn, in his first full term. Quinn, a Democrat with Democrats in control of the General Assembly, vetoed 41 bills in the 97th General Assembly, with 17 becoming law with legislator action. In the 98th General Assembly, he vetoed 25 bills, 10 of which became law.

Republican Gov. Bruce Rauner, meanwhile, issued 111 vetoes in the 99th General Assembly of 2015 and 2016, with only four of them overturned, as Democrats were just short of the supermajority threshold in the House.

Rauner saw more Republican pushback in the 100th General Assembly in 2017 and 2018, including when it came to passing the state's first operating budget in more than two years by overriding his veto. He issued 142 vetoes in the 100th General Assembly, 51 of which became law through lawmaker action.

This week, Pritzker issued his first veto of the current General Assembly, a technical fix to drafting errors in the state budget. Lawmakers inadvertently left out effective dates in portions of the bill, and they accepted Pritzker's changes on partisan lines. He signed the bill Thursday with the changes.

TRACK: Hunt best for Princes

Continued from Page 20 Hoffmann, 18th in the 3,200 (10:15.50); Tyler Sheridan, 25th in the 3,200 (10:38.40); and the E-B 4x200, which placed 23rd in 1:35.44.

While that 4x200 time was not the fastest for E-B's all-underclass relay of Aiden Frail, Brayden Lehman, Jakoby McKown and Johnny York, it was an encouraging sign for Meyers.

"Even though they didn't run their best time, they came close and now they've had that experience," Meyers said. "So I'm really proud of those guys, too."

For Princeville, Grant Hunt placed 15th in the 400 (52.16) for his best finish and placed 17th in the 100 after running a personal best of 11:35. He was 22nd in the 200 in 23.69.

Hunt also anchored the Princes' 24th-place 4x100 relay, which also included Marcel Primera, Denver Hoerr and Tayshaun Kieser. All return next year.

Hoerr was also 23rd (4:47.27) in the 1,600, which was won by Mathew Olech of Elgin Harvest Academy in 4:21.59.

Olech was also second in the 3,200 (9:19.92) and helped lead his team to a state title with 51 points to 38 for runnerup Salt Fork.

Tiny Cowden-Herrick was third with 37 points thanks to the scoring of two athletes: jumper and hurdler Jadon Robertson (first in high jump and 110 hurdles and third in long jump) and thrower Daniel Lucas (first in shot put).

E-B was 26th with 11 points.

E-B 4x800 second again

Trojans take second in relay for fifth time in school history

Top E P 4y200 relave

By JEFF LAMPE

For The Weekly Post CHARLESTON – One of these years, an Elmwood-Brimfield 4x800 relay is going to win a state title.

But until that finally happens, the Trojans will be proud to add to an already-impressive resume of relay finishes. Another chapter was written last Thursday during a steamy state meet, as E-B ran to second place in the twomile relay for the fifth time in school history.

The quartet of seniors Blake Rosenbohm, Eli Stevenson and Luke Hoffmann and junior Thomas Harmon posted a seasonbest time of 8:06.63 to finish behind the 8:00.77 of Niles Northridge Prep.

And unlike some years, when E-B lost a lead in the final leg, this time around it was up to anchor Harmon to close ground and pass runners to boost the Trojans to second.

"We did a good job in our first two legs and then we handed off to Luke Hoffmann and he did a good job getting us close," E-B Coach Gregg Meyers said.

From there, it was all up to Harmon, whose split time of 1:57.1 would have won the open 800 race later in the day.

Running third when he took the baton behind Niles and El Paso-Gridley, Harmon passed Asa Smith of EP-G and then held off a late charge by third-place Elgin Harvest Christian Academy.

"I think I just ran that perfectly," Harmon said. "I went out quick and took the second lap strong and was able to kick it in the last 200."

That sealed a fourth consective 4x800 medal at state for E-B, which now has 14 overall. And yes, five of them are second-place finishes. Twice, Meyers recalled, E-B had the lead on the last leg.

"The problem is, we had one kid that ran a 1:58 and another ran a 1:58.5 or 1:59. So they ran really good races," Meyers said. "Unfortunately, they were going against kids that could run a 1:52 and we didn't have a big enough lead."

Two Niles Northridge Prep runners also placed ahead of Harmon in the open 800, where he finished seventh in a time of 1:58.97 in his first individual event at the state meet. Eli Mojonnier of Bismarck-Henning-Rossville-Alvin won in 1:57.33. Denver Hoerr of Princeville was 29th in 2:07.78.

Harmon said he did not run as well in the open 800 as in his anchor leg. "I just went out too slow and had to make up a lot of ground," Harmon said. "It's just something I'll take to next year."

For Harmon, it was a satisfying finish after a difficult sectional during which he got overheated in winning the 800 and placed fourth in the 1,600 after having coming in seeded second.

Missing the mile may have been fortunate given the steamy temperatures athletes endured last week at state.

"I was almost glad I didn't have to worry about [the 1,600] this year," Harmon said. "But next year I want to qualify in the 800 and the 1,600." Farmington had the next top finisher for an area team, with a 4x400 relay that finished 12th in 3:34.44 and consisted of Adian Basalay, Dane Hitchcock, Logan Morse and Sam Fletcher.

Placing 17th in the 4x400 in 3:37.9 was E-B's quartet of freshman Isaiah Hill, Stevenson, Rosenbohm and Harmon.

Other finishers for E-B included Hoffmann, 13th in the mile in 4:36.44; Continued on Page 19
